South Sudan gained independence in 2011 after decades of civil war and conflict. Since 2013 they live in a state of civil war. This young country needs help in many aspects of life – from improving literacy in young people to improving health standards for mothers and babies, from introducing health standards for mothers and babies, from introducing health standards for mothers and babies, from promoting sustainable farming methods to trauma healing in local communities and laying the foundations for a lasting peace.

Solidarity is a project of UISG and USG, supported by over 260 congregations, private donors and international agencies with funding, personnel and expertise. Congregations together work in harmony to accompany and empower the people of South Sudan.

Thank you with all the heart...
Solidarity aims to accompany and empower the people of South Sudan, helping to heal the wounds caused by the armed conflict, walking together towards a better future. Solidarity pays special attention to ensure that South Sudanese girls and women have equal access to education and training, and strives to prevent gender violence.

TEACHER TRAINING

In order to respond to the educational needs of South Sudan, it was decided to develop institutions for teacher training as the most effective way to help increase the level of literacy in the country. Due to the conflict, Malakal facility has been destroyed in December 2013. The STTC in Yambio has 110 residential students, but the facility will be able in short time to put up to 160. To date, there are 224 graduates of whom 20% are women. Solidarity Teacher Training College is now recognized as a leading provider of primary teacher training, giving to its students the National Certificates. In addition, in-service programs delivered in many locations of the country have reached a total of about 3,000 teachers.

TRAINING NURSES AND MIDWIVES

The diploma program for nurses and midwives has been set up at the request of the Catholic Bishop Conference, with the full support of the Republic of South Sudan, because of the critical needs in the health area. The Catholic Health Training Institute in Wau delivers 3 years of full-time academic and clinical training to 110 residential students. Their clinical practice is delivered in hospitals and health care centres. The country and the Nuba Mountains benefit from the high standard formation received by the students.

SUSTAINABLE AGRICULTURE

Solidarity is working to promote the formation of small farmers. Solidarity Farm in Riimenze is employing each day from 45 to 80 local people, as casual or permanent workers on more than 25 cultivated ha. Many of them are women. The development of better agricultural practices and the introduction of new crops and livestock improve the skills of the people and help them to generate income and win the fight against hunger. Even during these troubled times, the farm remains open sustaining the local people as a sign of hope and a provider of opportunity for the afflicted people of South Sudan.

PASTORAL WORK

The pastoral dimension of the work of Solidarity reaches dioceses, internally displaced camps, and many local communities. Meetings and workshops on peace and reconciliation, on trauma healing and community building, are held across the country. As a partner of the Church, Solidarity is involved in the formation of sisters, brothers, priests, catechists, parish and diocesan staff, and the community leaders focusing on capacity building and promotion of peace and reconciliation.
